

New Global on-line e-learning launch!!

I am delighted to announce that I am very close to finalising agreements to launch an online e-learning system with a Global LMS platform.

The plan is for a New Year launch.

Between four and five courses are in plan for 2017, with the first to coincide with the launch date. The intention is that the online will compliment and also offer choice to my existing MasterClass programmes.

I have previously worked in this area within “blended learning”, where programmes are part online but also supported with the standard face to face delivery. This includes a large two year project in Botswana and a 100 day delivery with the NHS training every Team Manager in NHS Direct.

More recently, I have collaborated with Manchester University with one of their Global MOOC programmes.

Online learning can become available to millions of people across the world who may not have previously had the opportunity, not forgetting providing choice to organisations and individuals who will be able to access Learning Development materials from anywhere and at any time!

Exciting times...More detail to follow.
